This survey was made possible in part by a grant from the U.S. Department of the Interior's National Park Service, administered by the Ohio Historic Preservation Office of the Ohio Historical Society. However, its contents do not necessarily reflect the opinions or policies of the Ohio Historical Society or the Department of the Interior.

Research Design

The objective of this project was to complete the comprehensive survey of the downtown area and the Pleasant Heights and LaBelle neighborhoods of Steubenville. The areas selected for this survey were identified as priorities for further survey work in the 1986 Survey Report. The Ohio Historic Inventory criteria were used as the basis in determining which properties were inventoried. There were six areas that were surveyed -- the neighborhood south of the Central Business District, the area north of the Central Business District west of the railroad, and the former industrial area along the river-front east of Third Street, LaBelle and Pleasant Heights, and Brady Estates. The project resulted in the completion of 161 Ohio Historic Inventory forms. The majority of the documented buildings are single family houses, although apartment buildings, commercial buildings, schools, churches, fire stations and industrial buildings were also recorded.

The history/architecture survey is only one element in a larger project undertaken with Certified Local Government funding from the Ohio Historic Preservation Office. Other elements include the development of two historic contexts which are the beginning of a comprehensive preservation plan for Steubenville, and development of two training workshops -- one was held for members of the Steubenville Historic Landmarks Commission and the other for the general public. The historic contexts and evaluation of all completed Ohio Historic Inventory forms for resources related to these two contexts is published as a separate report.

Environment

The City of Steubenville is located on the west bank of the Ohio River approximately 68 miles downriver from Pittsburgh. The river runs north to south and forms the eastern edge of the city. Steubenville's river frontage is about three miles. The 19th century portion of the city is surrounded by high hills (which were once densely forested) intersected by deep ravines. Until the early 20th century, there was very little development on the hillsides. The 19th century city was laid out on level land and follows a grid pattern while later development on the hillsides tended to follow the topography.

Steubenville's development as a transportation hub and industrial city was enhanced by its location along a major navigable river and an abundance of natural resources. Coal, natural gas, limestone, and clay were all found in the nearby hills.

Transportation Routes

The Ohio River was the first major transportation route to what has become the City of Steubenville. Keelboats appeared on the Ohio River route from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati as early as the late 1790s. The first steamboat pulled into Steubenville in 1811 and by 1815 boatyards had been established here. Public highways were also being built during the early 19th century and Steubenville served as a point where a link was made between river and overland transportation routes.

By the mid-19th century there was increasing interest in the construction of a railroad. The first railroad to provide service to Steubenville was the Pittsburgh and Steubenville Railroad which began service in 1854. The Cleveland-Pittsburgh line was extended to include Steubenville in 1856. The Civil War halted railroad construction for a while but by the late 19th century, Steubenville was served by three railroads. The excellent transportation network made the movement of raw materials and finished products in and out of Steubenville relatively easy and industry thrived. Steel, clay products, and glass were among the items manufactured in Steubenville and shipped to the world.

Interurban railroads were introduced in 1899 and in 1910 there were three interurban lines in operation. These served to connect Steubenville with nearby cities which contributed to Steubenville's growth as a commercial center for the region. Further, they connected Steubenville with W. Virginia and the Weirton Steel Co. across the river making it possible for people to live in Steubenville and work in Weirton.

In addition to the extensive interurban system, streetcars were introduced to encourage suburban development on the hillsides. Several lines connected the suburbs with the downtown. This system in combination with the popularity of the automobile led to the rapid expansion of the city during the first three decades of the 20th century. Further extensive suburban growth has taken place in the last 20 years so that Steubenville and Wintersville (a city directly west of Steubenville) have contiguous boundaries.

Steubenville, like many other Ohio cities, is no longer served by passenger trains. The lines are still heavily used by freight trains and barges are a common sight on the river. The highways, however, serve most of the present transportation needs of Steubenville.

Historical Development

Steubenville is the largest city in Jefferson County and has always served as the governmental, commercial, industrial and cultural center of the county. The earliest settlers arrived during the late 18th century when the building of Fort Steuben began, and the first public sale of lots took place in 1797. Commercial activity started almost immediately. By 1830 there were taverns, hotels, dry goods stores, tanneries, woolen, grist and flour mills and at least two banks. The population grew from 2,000 in 1820 to over 6,000 in 1850. Much of this rapid growth was due to Steubenville's location on transportation routes and the Ohio River. Stagecoach lines connected Steubenville to Pittsburg, Wheeling, Canton and Ashtabula in the 1820's. River steamboats were introduced at this same time and Steubenville benefitted. It had an active steamboat-building industry and it served as a major port connecting river and overland stage routes.

The second half of the 19th century was marked by rapid growth of the industrial base of Steubenville and by its increased importance along transportation routes. Some of the industries founded during this period include: Ohio Foundry (1847); Steubenville Pottery Co. (1879); and Jefferson Iron Works Co. (1880). Glass-making became an important industry. Acme Lead Glass Co. (owned by the Gill Brothers) was the established in the 1870's and was the largest glass-making facility in the city. Other glass manufacturers included Steubenville Flint Glass Bottling Co. and the Jefferson Glass Co. Soap and chemicals were also manufactured in Steubenville. Steubenville had railroad service in 1855 on the Steubenville & Indiana Railroad. The city was also served by the Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railroad and the Pittsburgh and Steubenville Railroad.

This period was marked by growth in areas other than industry. A new courthouse was constructed in 1874 and a number of the fine churches were constructed downtown. The Masonic Lodge, Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks were all well-established.

The most significant industrial development at the beginning of the new century was the purchase of the Jefferson Iron Works by the La Belle Iron Works of Wheeling in 1900. A 25 acre tract was purchased at the same time and a new facility was built at the south end of town. It was one of the largest iron and steel plants in the U.S. at the time and had a production capability of 400 tons/day per furnace. Wheeling Steel purchased La Belle Iron works in 1920.

Interurban railroads were introduced in 1899, and by 1910 Steubenville was served by 3 interurban lines. The Steubenville Bridge Co. and the Tri-State Traction Co. were formed to build an interurban to connect W. Virginia communities with Steubenville. The bridge at the foot of Market Street was built and the line opened in 1905. As the industry in the city prospered, the population continued to increase. Immigration began with the coming of the railroad and peaked around the turn-of-the-century. Irish and German were among the earliest immigrants and were followed by southern and eastern Europeans. Many of the ethnic churches and organizations established by the immigrants are active today. Residential development on the hillsides was sparse before the early 1900's. Publications from the first half of the 20th century describe, with pride, the industrial heritage of Steubenville.

Like many northeastern industrial cities, Steubenville has undergone a great deal of change in the past 25 years. The steel mills and other industries have been affected by imported steel and the general state of the economy. Suburban development has occurred to the west along U.S. Rt. 22. This has led to some deterioration in the center city area. There are efforts underway, however, to bring about the economic revitalization of the downtown and older neighborhoods.

Previous Surveys

A comprehensive survey of the Central Business District (CBD) and the neighborhood immediately north of the CBD was undertaken by Benjamin D. Rickey & Co. for the City of Steubenville in 1986. Approximately 150 Ohio Historic Inventory forms were prepared at that time. There has not been any other survey work undertaken in Steubenville.

Following the 1986 survey the Steubenville Commercial Historic District and Union Cemetery/Beatty Park were listed in the National Register of Historic Places. There are only two individual listings in the National Register, which include the YMCA at 214 N. Fourth St. (also included in the Commercial Historic District) and the Ohio Valley Clay Co. at Washington and Water Streets. The North End Fire Station at 417 North Street, and the Federal Land Office on South Third Street have been determined eligible for the National Register by the National Park Service.

There are no existing listings for Steubenville in the Historic American Buildings Survey, the Historic American Engineering Record, or as a National Historic Landmark.

Research Methods

The Steubenville Public Library and the Jefferson County Historical Association have extensive collections of historical material. Primary sources of data used for this survey included newspapers, Sanborn and atlas maps, and city directories. Secondary sources included both centennial and sesquicentennial publications, several Chamber of Commerce publications from the early 20th century, and county histories from the early 20th centuries. Assistance was provided by knowledgeable staff people at both of these facilities.

These sources were used while conducting research on individual buildings recorded on OHI forms. Attached is a bibliography of the most helpful source material.

There was little written information about several properties. Additional assistance in researching these properties was provided by Margaret Harris, the Jefferson County Historical Association's representative on the Steubenville Historic Landmarks Commission.

Field Techniques

All the field survey was conducted by a two-person team - Nancy Recchie (Project Director) and Jeffrey Darbee. The team approach was particularly efficient because it allowed for one person to take photographs and map the resources while the other gathered field data on draft Ohio Historic Inventory (OHI) forms. Every street in the study area was driven and the in densely developed areas where there were many noteworthy buildings, the areas were covered on foot. The comprehensive nature of this survey result in 158 OHI forms.

Public Involvement

Two presentations were made to the Steubenville Historic Landmarks Commission regarding the survey — one while field work and research was underway, and the other when all of the OHI forms were completed. The Commission has representation from the Jefferson County Historical Association, the Franciscan University of Steubenville, the Steubenville

Planning Commission and Steubenville City Council. The Commission members are knowledgeable about local history and were asked to comment on the prepared inventory forms and to suggest any properties that may have been overlooked. All of the Commission meetings are covered by the local media. The recommendations for potentially eligible individual buildings and historic districts was covered in detail in both the Steubenville and Wheeling, W. Va. papers. Additionally, Benjamin D. Rickey & Co. staff members are available to make presentations to local community groups if requested to do so by the City of Steubenville.

ANALYSIS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Unlike the survey efforts undertaken in 1986, which recorded mostly 19th century buildings, this project focused on early 20th century development in Steubenville. The downtown areas -- south end, north end west of the railroad and the former industrial area along the riverfront -- included both late 19th and early 20th century properties. However, the hilltop involved neighborhoods that developed during the 20th century. Both LaBelle and Pleasant Heights developed largely during the 1900-1930 period, while Brady Estates developed during the 1930s and 1940s.

The following themes are represented by the inventoried resources: commercial, education, ethnic/immigration, manufacturing/industry, military, politics/reform/welfare, religion, social/cultural, and transportation. Each of the inventoried buildings were evaluated to determine which ones appear eligible for listing in the National Register either individually or as part of a historic district.

Several potential residential historic districts were identified. The suggested boundaries are illustrated on the attached map, although further research required for a National Register or local designation may suggest some minor modification of these boundaries. The proposed districts are as follows:

Bellevue Blvd. Historic District

This is one of the finest early 20th century residential streets in the city. It is perched on the edge of the hill overlooking the Ohio valley. Although the two hilltop areas which comprise LaBelle View and Pleasant Heights were annexed to the city in 1871, these suburbs were not developed until the early 20th century. Pittsburgh investors purchased 170 acres from the Means heirs and formed the LaBelle View Land Co. Nearly all of the buildings within the proposed boundaries are considered contributing to the character of the district. Many of the city's leading citizens built homes here and it continues today to be a fine neighborhood. Most of the buildings within the proposed boundaries have survived with very few significant alterations. The area consists of approximately 8 large square blocks.

Ross Park Historic District

This proposed district is composed of a single block with houses on one side of the street facing a wooded area of Beatty Park. According to the 1902 Mueller's Atlas of Steubenville and the Sesquicentennial History from 1947, there once was racetrack where Ross Park addition is today. Pleasant Heights addition was opened in 1890, although the 1902 Mueller's atlas shows little development occurred during the first decade. The homes in this proposed district were generally built within a short period of time -- the late 1920s to the late 1930s -- and have survived with few alterations. The curvilinear street, the substantial houses and their relationship to the park make this area distinctive.

Brady Estates Historic District

The area which was to become Brady Estates was annexed to the city in 1926 and the first section (west of Brady Avenue, east of Granard and south of Norton Place), most of which is included in the proposed district, was platted in 1929. The area was expanded in 1956, north of Williams Place. The older area was developed during the 1930s and 1940s, although there are some newer houses within the proposed boundaries. The 50 year rule for National Register eligibility may be a hindrance for that designation for the next few years, however, the Steubenville Historic Landmarks Commission may want to consider it as a local district sooner. This area is unusual in that it was platted with landscaped islands, curvilinear streets and cul-de-sacs which were atypical of other Steubenville neighborhoods. Many of Steubenville's important businessmen -- especially those associated with the steel industry -- built and lived in these homes. It too, is still a fine residential area.

There are also a number of individual properties that appear to be eligible for both local and National Register designation. They include public buildings -- several schools, the Water Filtration Plant, the Belleview Park Clubhouse, the Carnegie Library, and the National Guard Armory -- as well as several churches, individual homes, and industrial buildings. Most of the properties are eligible for architectural significance, but there are some that are also historically significant for associations with individuals or events important in local, state or national history. The Acme Glass Co. buildings that have been identified are only a portion of what was an enormous complex at one time, but are significant for their rarity, as resources related to most of the major industries are entirely gone.

The attached list of properties that were inventoried includes a notation on those which appear to qualify for designation.

Recommendations for Further Survey Work

Steubenville has expanded considerably since the mid-20th century. There are resources pre-dating 1950 that are located outside the study area for this project but are located within the city limits. Since the Steubenville Historic Landmarks Commission has city-wide jurisdiction, it would make sense for the remaining area of the city to be surveyed. It is estimated that the additional survey would yield approximately 40-70 Ohio Historic Inventory forms.

A historic archaeological survey would also be appropriate especially in areas where there were major industries and along the riverfront. This is discussed in more detail in the recommendations section of the Context report.

A comprehensive map of all the inventories properties should also be prepared for use by the city's planning department, the Historic Landmarks Commission, and for educating the general public.

LIST OF OHIO HISTORIC INVENTORY FORMS

COMPLETED AS PART OF 1990 CERTIFIED LOCAL GOVERNMENT PROJECT

The 161 Ohio Historic Inventory forms, completed during the survey, are listed below. Research was conducted to identify a particular theme with which the property was associated, however, not every property has an associated theme. The following list is grouped first by theme and the properties without themes are listed alphabetically. The "yes" in the eligibility column denotes a property that is thought to be individually eligible for local or National Register listing. A "yes (D)" denotes a property thought to be eligible for local or National Register listing as part of a historic district.

was dedicated in 1902. Andrew Carnegie started his career as a telegraph operator in Steubenville. He was contacted by Dr. A.M. Reid who requested money for a library. $15,000 in bonds were issued to purchase the Sarratt property at Slack and Fourth Streets and a building was erected at a cost of $62,000. By 1947 there were also two branch libraries in Steubenville. This is among the earliest Carnegie Libraries in Ohio and it is a fine example of turn-of-the-century public architecture in Steubenville.

The main building features a symmetrical facade with entrance flanked by paired columns, round-arched openings on the first floor, stone beltcoars, decorative brickwork and tile roof. The single story support building also has large round-arched windows and a hipped roof.
43. History and Significance (Continue on reverse if necessary) The high-ressure reservoir opened in 1895. It was lined with tile and concrete and had a 5.6 million gallon capacity. In 1915, the filtration plant was installed. It is a handsome and well-preserved complex of civic architecture in Steubenville.

The first floor of this apartment building was divided into 4 bays--three sections appear to have been used as offices or storefronts with round-arched doorway flanked by residential size windows, and a larger round-arched opening with concrete surround which appears to lead to the upper floors. 6/1 windows are used throughout and the cornice and lintels are cast concrete. The name -- King-Naylor --

An apartment building has been located at this address since 1905. It is still in use as apartments today and is in fairly good condition.

Located very close to the street on the extreme western edge of the downtown area of Steubenville.

27. History and Significance Built 1905 by Steubenville Bridge Company, which was formed by Steubenville businessman Dohrman Sinclair. He also formed Tri-State Traction Company, which had a streetcar line across the bridge. One car line ran north to Holliday's Cove, near Weirton, and the other south to Wellsburg, connecting to Wheeling. Sinclair built the bridge and car line after promising to do so to induce the Follansbee Brothers to build a tin mill on the W. Va. side; this ensured easy transportation for mill workers. Rare example of suspension-type bridge in Ohio.

28. Description of Environment

West end is in downtown Steubenville, Ohio, where ground slopes down to riverbank, then drops sharply to water. On W. Va. side, a road had to be cut out of steep river bluffs. East end of bridge still butts right into narrow shelf on which W. Va. Route 2 sits.

27. History and Significance

This has always been the site of the main Ohio River crossing of one of the earliest through lines Pittsburgh-St. Louis. Original bridge built 1861-65 by Holliday's Cove RR Co, 8 spans, 1. 2060 ft, height 95'. Pittsburgh & Steubenville RR opened 1865; Stbvl. & Indiana to Newark & Cols. opened 1855. Pittsburgh, Cols. & Cincinnati consolidated line 1865; Pittsburgh, Cinti. & St. Louis (Pan Handle Railway) took over 1868. Orig. & new bridge cl897 were metal deck trusses with through truss channel span.

28. Description of Environment PC&StL reorganized as Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis 1890, leased to Pennsylvania RR 1921. To Penn Central 1968, ConRail 1976.

Double spans over busy SR7 at west end, which curves to south. WVa shore recently disrupted by new highway construction.
